FOAP SOAP VS. LIQUID SOAP

The popularity of foam hand soap over liquid hand soap amongst end users is growing, due in part to its being more economical, effective and easy to clean. Foam soap systems are ideal for high-traffic and commercial restrooms, where touchless soap dispensers can distribute the right amount of product directly into users' hands, lessening the chance for cross-contamination and ensuring that the product doesn't end up on floors, sinks and counters. Because of its lathering qualities, patrons are less inclined to go back to foam dispensers for more soap, meaning facilities cut back not only on product and packaging waste, but also on water. Foam hand soap also saves on labor costs. It needs less refilling, drips less than liquid soap and doesn't build up on the floor and become slippery the way that liquid soap can.
